“Nutritional Issues in Older Adults”

By Dr. Ronni Chernoff, PhD, RD, LD, CSG, FADA

This four hour session will focus on nutritional issues in older adults, including factors that may contribute to both increased and decreased nutrient needs. Appropriate markers and measurement of nutritional status, changes in key nutrient requirements, and strategies to meet nutritional needs in older, institutionalized or homebound adults will be explored. At the conclusion of this presentation, attendees should be able to:

- describe the physiological changes that occur with advancing age and the impact these changes have on the nutritional status evaluation and nutrition requirements;
- select an appropriate method to determine nutritional evaluation in older, healthy, chronically ill, or impaired individuals;
- identify which key nutrients are affected by advancing age;
- recognize the problems in meeting fluid needs to older adults; AND
- develop strategies to address the most common nutrition issues in long term care.
